RE: Letter from Livingstone Fagan

Just in case you haven't yet heard from Livingston, I thought I would share portions of a letter I received from him today:

"The abuse we have received at the hands of officials of government and others since February 1993 continues. But in recent times, never more so than following events in Oklahoma. You are probably aware that since the above event both myself and Renos have been re-located. I had come on the compound, having been in solitary for 135 days (a total of 240+ days since being at El Reno) on April 19th, in lieu of our memorial of events in Waco. Two days later while in the compound library communing with renos, we were both set upon, cuffed and placed in solitary. Subsequently notified of an investigation (the reasons or conclusion we were never notified of) we were held in solitary for several days. Finally and without notice we were moved.

"I understand that Renos is now housed in a facility in Atlanta. I arrived here in Oxford Wisconsin on May 8. It is located in a rural setting. From my observations a significant distance from the main cities. The officers appear more personable. This is in contrast to El Reno. An even greater contrast to Terre Haute, Indiana, where I stayed for a few days during the transit process. It was there I was to experience the most physical abuse of my entire experience in the prison system.

"When I arrived and without provocation I made it clear I was unprepared to
