ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I wish to thank Dr. Marylouise Neder and Mr. Ronald Fingerson, from School of Library Science—Emporia Kansas State College, for their useful suggestions, directing, and advising me to prepare this guide. I am also very thankful to the authorities of the Iyanism Documentation Center for providing facilities for publication and distribution of this guide.
FOREWORD

The Subject Guide to Iranian Librarianship Literature in English, 1860-1974 compiled by Abolghasem Khoosh-hni is the first such compilation to be made available.

Helpful to anyone interested in Iranian librarianship, it brings together in one place all English language articles and abstracts on the subject which have been written over a period of more than a century. To further aid the researcher, each listing is entered under author, title, and at least one subject heading. There are also listings for added entries as well as title variations where the same article has appeared under two or more titles. Annotations are included for citations of materials the author has examined or for which he found printed annotations.

The computerized format was chosen by the compiler to facilitate updating as well as corrections. Additions which the compiler hopes to bring out on a regular basis will increase the value of the compilation by keeping it current and making it more complete.

It is hoped that this bibliography will serve as the base for a larger, more comprehensive list which will include literature about Iranian libraries in languages other than English. The format was designed with this in mind. Eventually, the work may be expanded to include works on librarianship for a group of countries and become a major source of information in the study of comparative librarianship.

Mary Louise D. Neder

III
INTRODUCTION:

This guide attempts to be a step towards preparation of a complete and comprehensive bibliography about library and information science activities in Iran. In compiling this bibliography, I had in mind the following purposes:

1. To prepare a separate guide which will save the time of students and serve the librarians who are interested in articles about Iranian librarianship in the English language.

2. To facilitate retrieval of information in this area for those who would like to compare Iranian librarianship by gathering all relative bibliographies in one place.

3. To provide a list of bibliographical sources about Iran which helps a better understanding of Iranian civilization and indirectly facilitates any study about Iran.

4. To contribute to the improvement of library services in Iran by facilitating retrieval of information for conducting research in this area.

5. To provide a basis for making a comprehensive bibliography to include all materials about Iranian librarianship in all languages.

My incentive for preparing this bibliography was my eagerness to study the problems of extending library services in Iran. Unfortunately, so far, there has not been any published bibliography in this area; therefore for those who want to conduct research or survey iranian librarianship, it is very time consuming to go to different bibliographies to discover information in the area of study. I decided to compile such a bibliography which will be useful for all students of librarianship, particularly those who are doing their studies in English language institutions.

Features of this guide:

This guide provides a subject approach to the collected information. To increase chances of retrieval of an item, articles are indexed under different headings according to their subject contents. Some of the subjects are viewed in different ways. For example under the heading "Education for librarianship", there is a subdivision for "Standards"; similarly, under the heading "Standards and specifications", there are different types of subdivisions including the subdivision for "Education for librarianship".

In addition to the subject approach, there are two indexes for author and title of the items indexed. The author index not only includes the main authors, but joint authors, compilers, editors and any person who has made some sort of contribution to that work. The title index is the alphabetical arrangement of the first card for titles. This index also provides the access point for changed titles.

Methods of collecting data:

The information of this bibliography is mainly gathered from the following sources:
1. ERIC - Educational Resources Information Center, 1966--.
2. Information Science Abstracts, 1966--.
3. Library Literature, 1924--.
4. Library Science Abstracts, 1950--.

All available sources were consulted to obtain further information about other possible sources. The above list does not include all the reference sources from which the items in this guide were gathered; several other sources were checked but they had either similar information or they had no bibliography about Iranian librarianship.

DESIGN OF THE GUIDE:

In designing the format of this guide I tried to use the punched cards so that in future the possible increase in the number of items indexed in this guide would not make any trouble. The format of describing the bibliographic information is the same as Library Literature. In doing this I assumed that this reference source is well known to the librarians and students of librarianship, and following the same format will be easier for the users of this guide.

The subject headings also are selected from this source, but in some cases necessary modifications were made to fit them for this guide. For example, the heading "National library" in this guide is equivalent of "National libraries--Iran" in Library Literature.

All subject headings start with the first column of the punched cards to be more easily seen at first glance. All punched cards have a code number in columns two and three to facilitate sorting of cards with automatic devices. The codes are as follows:

11-15 Authors(Personal or Corporate).
21-22 Title.
31-39 Description of the source.
41-99 Annotations, abstracts or reviews.

The last category of codes provides the possibility of including longer reviews in the future, because card codes for this part permits using up to 58 cards for describing an item.

Each entry has an identification number; the author and title index items refer to this identification number. To facilitate future additions five digits(columns 75-80) are provided for the identification number; therefore up to 99,999 entries can be described in the present format, which I think, will be sufficient for at least the next five years to index English materials in this area.

There are two lists of abbreviations that will help to get familiarity with the abbreviations used in this guide. The first one is the "Abbreviations of periodical names", and the second list is "Abbreviations and acronyms". In both lists I have tried to use abbreviations which are used by Library Literature. However in some cases the abbreviations were not in this source so I had to make my own.

The examples on page six will be useful for understanding. the format of this guide. By referring to indexes and the content for these two examples, the whole format will be clear for those who might have any trouble in this regard.

Although I have put a lot of work into gathering the items in this guide, due to limitations of available resources, I do not claim that it is complete. In fact as I gathered the information from secondary sources, the possibility of entering errors in some parts is inevitable. However I hope those who are interested in a complete bibliography about Iranian librarianship will advise me in any area that lends itself to revisions or additions. I shall appreciate any comments or suggestions that help preparation of an ideal bibliography in this area. I do hope additions and updating will come out on a regular basis each year.
