NORMAL BOYS DOING WELL AT LEON SPRINGS

The writer paid a visit to the Officers Training Camp at Leon Springs, or Camp Funston, Sunday, and was very much gratified to find the old Normal boys, who had not gone to San Antonio or San Marcos for the week end, in fine spirits, good health, and seemingly very happy to have the chance to enjoy their gratified help but detect a slight withstanding the fact that the week end, in fine training camp. As far as the village consists of a station, not much can be said. The village consists of a grocery store, a blacksmith shop, a hamberger's place, and probably two or three houses that are called residences. Since the Post Office Department has made a post office of Camp Funston and put the camp on the map by so doing, the men in training are stationed at Camp Funston, Texas, U. S. A., which is three miles beyond Leon Springs.

Upon the arrival of the visitor at Camp Funston he is at once pleased and surprised at the picturesque and idealness of the camp. Situated in a beautiful valley among shady trees, surrounded by towering hills covered with great oaks and spring grass, it is indeed an inviting place. The men seem to heartily appreciate their surroundings and to enter into the spirit of the camp with zeal and enthusiasm, realizing that they are better and more ideally situated than would otherwise be the case at some army post or mobilization camp.

The personnel of Camp Funston is far above par and infinitely better than the laymen would at first imagine. Indeed the very flower of Texas the great Southwest composes Camp Funston. One is at once impressed with the dignified and aristocratic, albo democratic, aspect of the camp. Jankers sons, statesmen, statesmen's sons, lawyers, politicians, business men, one young millionaire from New York State, a high in social, business, and political life are taking the training preparatory to receiving commissions in the Federal Army. The Normal boy who has entered the camp is indeed fortunate to have such men as comrades.

The work at Camp Funston is far from easy. From the time reville is sounded at 5:45 in the morning until taps as night the officer rookie is continually busy, with short intermissions for breathing spells and meal hours. It is a continual one, two, three, four; squads right and squads left until the call to supper when the men are given short rest spell, after which they must assemble for lectures and study until retiring time, or taps. No minute is unoccupied and the men are learning in earnest how to most efficiently crowd twenty-four hours. It is a splendid training, and in Camp Funston Uncle Sam has twenty-nine hundred of the best and most loyal men that America can produce.

WHAT WILL THE REST OF US DO?

The decree has gone out that our young men between the ages of 21 and 30 shall place themselves at the disposal of the government on June 5 by registering in accordance with the directions of the Secretary of State. Under that edict the path of duty and service is made clear for a great many of our fellow-students. They are simply to give the information required, and then await the command of those who are in a position to know even better than ourselves where we are needed most in the interest of world peace and in the deposition of the world kings.

For the rest of us, who are either too young or too old to come within the terms of that edict, the way is not so clear. But it is certainly not an occasion for us to rejoice at our exemption. If the love of country reigns free in our hearts, what we shall be able to do is of the most vital concern. We too are expected to follow some suggestions not morally binding. What then, can we do?

In the first place, our duty is to inform ourselves. The government authorities have made every reasonable effort to indicate to alert minds what the country needs. The newspapers and current magazines are full of official communications. This is not a time for quibbling, but a time for us to make practical what ever endorsement we may have received from our year of study. As the year closes over us, shall we stand united beneath the flag with our minds and our energies consecrated to the acquirement and dissemination of the knowledge that is at this moment most needful, or is it our purpose to stand eyeless at the mill in mean selfishness while our young recruits march, it may be, to the trenches? Indifference and inattention and ignorance are worse than cowardly.

Again, we can be economical, we can do away with all extravagance and wastefulness. The duty of wearing plain clothing and of eating simple fare falls particularly upon the person of means or the leader of society, for he it is who sets the pace and has it in his power to work a hardship on the person in poorer circumstances.

Lastly, we can produce something and help others produce something in the way of food for man or beast. Through agricultural journals and bulletins we can, with a little study, improve feeding methods so as to produce at a given expense more butter fat, eggs and meat than are now produced. We can plant summer and fall gardens, and whatever feed crops are adaptable to the community in which we may reside. We can put our country above laziness and selfishness.

Our Flag

There's a flag that waves in Sunny France,
And one in India;
There's a flag that flies o'er English isles,
And one in Germany.
But there is one, the only one,'Tis topmost in the fray;
'Tis the grand old flag, the Stars and Stripes,
That waves in U. S. A.
Her stars are brighter than those at night,
Her stripes the glory of the Day,
She's the grandest flag in all the world,
The flag of U. S. A.
It's the flag our fathers died for,
Our mothers laughed and cried for,
Our sons and daughters denied for,
The flag of U. S. A.
—Lillian Remili.
It's my flag and your flag,
The flag of victory!
And may it always be our flag,
The flag of Liberty.

The Y. W. C. A. enjoyed a treat Friday afternoon when Miss Davidson, Y. W. secretary for the University, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Child and the War." All present were greatly impressed. The speaker urged that each girl use whatever influence she might have in her home community to bring about the passage of the child labor law to be voted on this coming September.

CLOSING OF NORMAL

Some hearts are glad, some hearts are sad, when time comes for parting, and this time is just about to come. When each one will say good bye and go to their respective homes.

We hope not with regret that you attended our school, but glad that you did come to S. W. T. Normal. And those that did not get diplomas we want you to feel that San Marcos will be glad to welcome you back next term. We want to thank you for your liberal patronage the past year, and assure you it has been appreciated and when ever in San Marcos come in to see us.

BREWARD’S

Who’s Who and Why
In Normal Athletics.

Phil McGee came here a Freshman in 1915-16 and easily made the football team playing an all star game in the line and doing the majority of Normal’s toe work. Phil was too light to make the track team last year so he had to wait till this year to make another letter, and he made it in a rush. He not only made Normal team but was an all star team man, his work at tackle and ball booting gave him the job. Next year Phil is captain of the team, the first married man that has received that honor, and under him we are expecting a great team.

Clem Sherrill has just been at Normal this year but his superior work at center on the football team and at first on the base ball team make it impossible to leave him out. At center he played a better game than has been seen at that position in several years in San Marcos. As a first baseman Slim is unparalleled and as a hitter he has a higher average than any man that ever went to Normal so far as we have record. It is a real pity that Clem is a Senior but it is possible for him to come back for fifth year work.

Every Days Hold Last Meeting of the Year.

The Every Days, the most thrifty society in school, held the last meeting of the year Saturday afternoon. Having more money in the treasury than any other society, they decided, after giving their share towards the gift for Harrison's Dry Goods Store. They decided to contribute a memorial plate of Miss White a former teacher in the Normal.

The Every Days song and yell showed the spirit of the Every Days at the last meeting as much as at the others.
