Biographical/Historical note

The National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) survey program at the postsecondary education level provides statistical information used by planners, policymakers, and educators in addressing a multitude of issues. One major source of this information is the annual Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS) Survey which provides a variety of data on the nation's 9,800 public and private postsecondary institutions. Special studies of students, financial aid, postsecondary faculty, and bachelor's degree recipients, doctoral degree recipients, transcript studies, and various longitudinal studies, complement IPEDS.
