Abstract

The experiences of people of color and women are some of the most under-represented and over-stereotyped realities of media. This screenplay addresses the restrictions that society has put on women and minorities, while keeping into account the responsibility that a white writer has to not silence the experiences of others. Lila is the lead female role who is tired of being sexualized and calls for an end to the assumptions that she needs validation through the attention of others. Julian is a black man who has grown weary of the masculine and racial expectations that he is held to as a minority. Through an unorthodox friendship, both Lila and Julian find their voices. Lila and Julian most prominently express the desire to have their stories told with acknowledgment of their personalities instead of their demographic. The story takes place within the experiences of Wyatt, a writer and director, who is attempting to create a narrative with depth and imagination, without stereotyping his characters. Through discussions with people who have dealt with prejudice, Wyatt has an awakening to his own biases and discovers what it means to relay the stories of those without a voice.
Author’s Note

The story is a surrealist take on the writing process. In production this story would push the bounds of visual realism while using a meta-communicative approach to each character.
INT. COFFEE SHOP

There is a line of people ordering their coffee and sitting at various tables. The barista, Barry, is taking orders.

BARRY

Alright people. Give me a second.

The boss man only scheduled one of me today, I am going to need a few of you to hold up. Here you go, sir.

Vlad takes his cup and as he is turning around Terri knocks it onto him. He quietly collects himself and heads to the bathroom to dry off.

As activity in the shop increases there is a percussive nature to the natural sounds; opening and closing of laptops, clinking of spoons in cups, small blows of the patrons as they cool down their drinks.

VLAD

If you would just- never mind. I’ll just come back later.
TERRI

I am sorry about that. Oh it’s you.

Be more careful next time. Here is my order and I am going to need-

Terri hands Barry a paper.

BARRY

...Ma’am I am sorry but we don’t serve french vanilla creamer. How about hazelnut or half ’n half?

TERRI

Still? I get it. I really do but I need a very specific drink or I’ll hear a whole shpeel on why the french were important to modern writing and why integration of European culture is critical to the evolution of...

VLAD

Couldn’t you just order it black and add it yourself?

BARRY

I find that to be possibly the most practical but also maybe the more insulting alternative.

VLAD

You saying that your simple caffeine jolt of a to-go order is objectively more valuable than what I can pick up on the closest gas station.

TERRI

It’s not as good.

VLAD

You mean it’s not as expensive. They are the same.

VIRGIL

Can you guys sort this out somewhere else? We literally do not have time for this.

BARRY

Here is your drink, Virgil.
TERRI
Why did he get his before mine?

BARRY
Like I was saying before, we only have about 3 of the things on your list and he orders the same thing everyday. Actually most of you do.

VLAD
You tracking our drinking habits now?

BARRY
I don’t see why you’re surprised. You all get here around the same time and your drinks get cold while you find something to argue about.

TERRI
It’s not all that crazy Barney.

VIRGIL
Bryan.
VLAD

Barry. if you would be so kind to top off my drink. As you see I encountered a little bit of a wake up call.

BARRY

That’ll be $4.75.

VLAD

I already paid for my drink.

BARRY

No. You paid for that drink. I am sorry but nothing comes free in this town.

VLAD

It wouldn’t hurt if there was a little bit of decency in this.

TERRI

I’ll pay for his drink but I really need to hurry.

VLAD

Thank you. Let’s go we are gonna miss the train.
BARRY
You all going to the same place?

TERRI
They tend to just end up in these types of scenarios.

Terri grabs her cups and pushes past the guys arguing at the counter. The shop is immediately silent. The scene is gradually stripped of dimension. As the characters leave, the setting transforms into sketches that are sprawled out on Wyatt’s desk.

INT. WYATT’S APARTMENT
Wyatt awakes with a start, realizing that his notes are haphazardly thrown across his desk. Wyatt rises, tidying up and wiping away the nap from his eyes.

WYATT
Terri what time is it?

His phone lights up and Terri’s voice holds a conversational yet automatic tone with Wyatt.

TERRI
It is 12:34 a.m. and 59 degrees outside.
WYATT

Thanks. Weather isn’t too bad. I may go for a walk.

TERRI

Would you like me to turn off the lights as you leave?

WYATT

Yes please. Also, play my brainstorming playlist.

Wyatt picks up his notepad and phone and leaves. He closes the door as the lights dim and music starts to play. He leaves and the characters from his notes start to move. The rustling of the papers knocks one of them onto the floor.

EXT. PARK

Lila is running on the path and keeping pace with some other night-joggers. People in benches check her out but she shows that she is used to it and picks up her pace by a group of guys who are trying to talk to her. She has headphones in and violin is playing when she gets a call. Her face is unseen but her black hair waves in the wind as she rambles on.
LILA

Hey so did you hear back from- No?

That’s okay I guess I- They told me they would get back to me this week with the final touches to the contract-

Wyatt walks the sidewalk and, underestimating the speed of the jogger, bumps into her.

WYATT

Oh, I am so sorry.

LILA

No worries, all good. No. Vlad isn’t on the project- He told you that? I will have to come in and talk to Wyatt then. Yeah. Don’t worry about it. Thanks- See you then- Bye.

Lila exits the park.

Lila runs off but leaves behind an animation of herself that is only viewable by Wyatt. She watches herself leave and starts to walk with Wyatt.
WYATT

How is your workout going?

LILA

I don’t know. Running is actually bad for your knees.

WYATT

Then why do you do it?

LILA

I suppose it is to look busy. It’s important to be healthy and people think spending a couple of jogs through the park will make you pretty.

WYATT

That doesn’t sound awful.

Validation is nice.

LILA

Validation is different from attraction and most people use the former to justify the latter. Like this guy.
Virgil walks around Wyatt as he conceals a drawing pad but keeps his focus on Lila.

    VIRGIL

That’s not fair, you don’t know that. I actually really like to draw people.

    LILA

Yeah? With nothing in return.

The scene flashes back to a park outside of Wyatt’s apartment.

EXT. STREET

Lila is on a bench as Virgil approaches.

    VIRGIL

Do I know you?

    LILA

I don’t think so.

    VIRGIL

I think I might. From a dream maybe. Or maybe you’re an angel.
LILA
Flattering really but I’m not interested.

VIRGIL
That’s just because we haven’t talked about it yet. You could give me some time to grow on you.

LILA
That sounds like something you would get checked out.

VIRGIL
I suppose I could check you out if you wanted.

LILA
I am not a book to be reserved. I would prefer my own space.

VIRGIL
Come on, a pretty girl like you shouldn’t be alone.

LILA
Whether I want to be alone or not is none of your business.
VIRGIL

Business is messy, I prefer art. I believe that the human anatomy is one of the purest forms of art, in and out of nature.

LILA

I do not like the nature of this conversation. Good day sir.

VIRGIL

At least call me?

LILA

I guess I will think about it.

Thank you, Virgil? Have a good day.

I have got to take a call.

Lila picks up her bag and runs off.

Virgil snidely walks off, saving her number in his phone.

The scene returns to Wyatt and Lila as Virgil walks away.

WYATT

Of course a tip would be nice.

LILA

And that’s fair, what isn’t is the way guys try to earn it.
WYATT

Some would find that level of boldness attractive.

LILA

Bold, yes, but the way I am hit on is inconsiderate and usually plain gross.

WYATT

I see.

LILA

Do you though?

Lila walks past Wyatt and he is left to start walking alone again.

INT. WYATT’S APARTMENT

Julian awakes from his nap and steps out of the sketchbook and runs into the kitchen to take out a snack he had put in the oven. The plate of leftovers is smoking and he takes it out and places it on the counter. He then knocks it off the counter while he trips over his cat. He turns off the stove and opens the microwave. He grabs his coffee, adding in sugar and creamer. His phone goes off as he starts to sip on his drink. He spits it out and runs off.

JULIAN

I’m late again. He’s not gonna-

Okay I just gotta-

Julian struggles to get his coat on and throws himself together as he leaves the room. Leaving his coffee on the counter. The cat knocks it over and the apartment is quiet for the first time all morning.

EXT. STREET

Wyatt passes by a group of dog walkers and walks down the sidewalk.

Terri runs to catch up, carrying an armful of papers and cups.

Passing by Terri, Wyatt feigns interest in various street life activities.

      TERRI

Sir... Sir...

      WYATT

Yes Terri how are you?
TERRI
You need to finish your report by this Friday.

WYATT
When you say it like that, it sounds like work.

TERRI
It is work, Sir.

WYATT
We have talked about this Terri, none of the formalities. It hinders the creative process.

TERRI
Mr. Prior ... If the process does not produce a tangible product, the level of creativity is pointless-

WYATT
That’s why you handle the books and I drink the coffee. Thanks, T. I’ll see you at the office. First thing tomorrow morning.
TERRI

You better have something.

WYATT

I always have something. The trick is putting it on paper.

TERRI

Don’t be late.

WYATT

No promises.

Wyatt passes by various street vendors. As he goes into the subway he drops the barely touched coffee cup into the trash.

INT. SUBWAY STATION

Julian is carrying his guitar and approaches Wyatt, following him into the subway car. He plays subtle riffs as they walk.

The car is mostly empty when they enter. On opposite sides of the car, Virgil and Lila avoid eye contact.

Behind Lila, Vlad is wiping off the coffee from before and it gradually disappears.

WYATT

You’re back.

JULIAN

Everyday, Sir. I mean mister...

Wyatt.

WYATT

I get it. What industry breaking idea do you have for me today.

JULIAN

A story about adversity. Diversity.

Forbidden love. I am thinking you could place it in space you know?

It could be like Star Trek meets
Titanic, with actual stakes to it.

WYATT

And the meat? The heart? The meaning?

JULIAN

What do you mean?
WYATT

I mean star crossed friends, lovers, parents have all been done already. I need something new. I need a different story.

JULIAN

I am just a performer, you are the one with the ideas.

WYATT

I need a message. Convincing others that they need it too is the key. I need something with a life in a lens we have never seen.

JULIAN

Then focus on the people. The story will tell itself.

Lila gets off at the stop and the Virgil moves closer to Wyatt and Julian.

VIRGIL

You want to hear a story? I have a good story.
Virgil starts to write more in his book but is distracted by a dog that has been focused on his shoes since the last stop.

JULIAN
You mean about that girl who just left and... Dude, that’s a little weird.

VIRGIL
It’s a good story really. Lila moved to L.A. to start a band. I think there was a friend with her who was trying to make it big or something. He got all coked out or whatever but those two shacked up.

JULIAN
In a lot of ways I don’t like where you’re going with this. None of my business dude. Besides, that guy doesn’t look like he does coke.

WYATT
They’re friend was. Those two just had a relationship.
JULIAN

Was it a relationship or just one of those one night hookups?

VIRGIL

I thought you didn’t care.

JULIAN

If I am forced to hear some tragic love story, I want to get the context straight.

WYATT

In good time but this is my stop.
Julian walk with me. Vlad stay out of people’s business and make sure Virgil doesn’t get into trouble.

Wyatt and Julian step out of the car.
Virgil returns to his portrait of Lila.

EXT. BASKETBALL COURT

Wyatt sits on a bench, watching a game of basketball play out. As the game continues, Virgil, Vlad, and Julian take the place of some of the players. The game settles down as the teams are being re-selected. As the guys discuss, the other players are chosen before them.

VLAD
You’re not ready for this. I played power forward at Boston.

JULIAN
That’s cool man.

VIRGIL
Rec team doesn’t count. What about you J, where did you play?

JULIAN
I was never really into basketball.
I was on the swim team for a year or two but I just came out because Wyatt just asked me to bond with you guys.

VLAD
That’s a good idea. We don’t seem to get out very much.

VIRGIL
Come on, you’re telling me that you’re a black guy who never-
The other players had picked teams, leaving Vlad, Virgil and Julian on one side of the court. Virgil had been called during his comment but everyone gets quiet.

VLAD

Dude that’s not-

JULIAN

Thanks but I got this.

Julian walks toward Virgil.

VIRGIL

I don’t think that’s necessary. I didn’t mean anything by it. Come on man.

JULIAN

What are you so scared about? Some guy who doesn’t look like you gets up in your face and you think things are gonna get violent.

VIRGIL

I was wrong man just forget it.
JULIAN

It’s not about the game man. It’s that you assumed I was a baller because I am darker than you.

VIRGIL

Let’s just play.

VLAD

Let him talk.

The game gets going as they talk.

JULIAN

Thanks... Despite how people like me are treated by the news, we don’t all look the same, or eat watermelon. I wasn’t born able to dunk or able to spit out Tupac lyrics. Even if I was, you don’t get to assume that. You got it?

VIRGIL

Dude I am seriously sorry. I didn’t realize.
JULIAN

It’s okay. It would just be better to get to know someone before supposing stuff like that.

Wyatt sits up, paying closer attention to the game than before.

VLAD

He won’t let us play anymore if you guys don’t play nice.

JULIAN

It’s not about the game, like I said, he wants to see us react to each other the way people do.

VIRGIL

If this is anything close to how people talk to each other I don’t want any part of that kind of story.

Virgil throws up a shot and walks off the court.

JULIAN

It’s nice to have the choice.

Julian puts on a hoodie and walks down the sidewalk.
VLAD

Guys come back! I... I’ll see you later I guess.

Vlad catches a pass and makes a layup that ends the game. He sits on a bench drinking water and wipes off some sweat with a towel. His phone lights up and he answers the call.

VLAD

Hello? Yes Ah hey whatcha need? I got it yeah. I am almost done with it- So she wants to help with it-

Oh she’s mad at me? I guess we need to hang out more- I am joking. I just mean there must be a misunderstanding. I will be there soon. You get my coffee? Thanks T.

Vlad gets up and runs across the court. He grabs a snack from a deli and starts walking down the street.

EXT. CENTRAL PARK

Julian is walking down the path when he sees a few different people avoiding him. The sound of the street cars and subway build on eachother like a club-track as he walks past people. Lila walks in and bumps Julian. She stares at him with a sense of playful interest.

Julian avoids eye contact and fidgets, obviously uncomfortable with the silence.

LILA

Can I ask you something?

JULIAN

The question itself presents a conundrum. There is no way for me to answer that with a sense of agency that would present anything more than my ability to comprehend that you are-

LILA

Great. So I was thinking.

JULIAN

I guess I have nothing else to do.

Let me have it.

LILA

I am having boy troubles.
JULIAN
I am not the guy to ask about that sort of thing.

LILA
What makes you so sure?

JULIAN
There are a few dozen ways I could tell it but basically we wouldn’t be a good match.

LILA
That’s perfect.

JULIAN
Excuse me?

LILA
That is my problem. All these guys think I am their perfect match and I am just not.

JULIAN
Your issue is you have the attention of the people around you. Do they listen to what you have to say?
LILA
It feels like every word sometimes.

JULIAN
I am definitely not the one to help you then.

LILA
How can you be so sure? You seem like a bright guy.

JULIAN
I can’t get others to see that though. It doesn’t matter how bright you are if everyone is worried about how... nothing forget it.

LILA
Oh... That doesn’t bother me. I have always liked-

JULIAN
Please don’t.

LILA
I am sorry?
JULIAN
Don’t try to be the understanding one about it. I have heard plenty of times; how my appearance is so unique, how my hair looks like it would be fun to play with.

LILA
There is nothing wrong with people acknowledging the things that make you special.

JULIAN
Just because someone says they appreciate your difference doesn’t mean they won’t try to use it against you.

LILA
That actually makes sense.

JULIAN
Really? You actually get what I am going through? Okay.
LILA

I think so. People find a physical trait that they can tell you is special. One that everyone else seems to make you self-conscious of. For me it tends to be my height or my... assets.

JULIAN

That’s not really my style but I think you are on the right track.

They find the thing that they have used to keep you in the dark.

A group of girls stare at Julian, one of them pointing out his hair.

JULIAN (CONT’D)

They use up their time with you to shower you with praises about bravery or adversity and turn it on themselves.

Lila grabs onto Julian.
LILA

There is an art to it though. It’s almost as if there is a revolution of understanding that they are drafting off of to make this new form of subjectification.

Julian pulls away but Lila grips on as the two walk.

JULIAN

Not exactly my deal but yeah sure. It’s the whole idea of being just a pretty face or whatever.

LILA

Beauty is overrated.

JULIAN

Come on, only beautiful people get away with saying stuff like that.

LILA

No, it’s true. Some old fashioned people in power chose between a myriad of traits to decide what is perfect. There is the obvious examples of things like sex, age... race. No offense.

JULIAN

You don’t need to say that, go ahead.

LILA

Right, there are those features but then the professional smooth talker can separate those from you. Almost as if he knows that, by acknowledging that he holds those things over you, he can hope you forget he is hunting you.

JULIAN

That seems a little dramatic.

LISA

Dramatic? Have you ever felt every head in the room swivel toward you? Been confined to the space that won’t draw attention? You can’t acknowledge it though. If you call them out on it, you’re assuming that all they want is sex. By bringing up that they should stop undressing you with their stares, they assume that the thought has crossed your mind to allow them the pleasure of performing their fantasy.

JULIAN
Not exactly but more or less. In a different scope I suppose. I have the conflicting pleasure of being easily noticeable yet silenced.
When I walk into the room I am undressed to the bone. As if I were roadkill that had sprung up and walked around. People do not give a dead man walking the benefit of the final say. It’s true that there are people who don’t feel quite that extreme about it. The radical on the other end seems to be a perverse rendering of my self worth. Those who don’t wish for me to be dead want to strip me of either my culture or my clothes.
They want my hair or my music or my exotic or my blessing. It doesn’t work like that. You don’t get to make up for every sin committed against me by complimenting the shoes I wear.

LILA
That is so sad. I am... I don’t know what to say.

JULIAN
You don’t have to say anything.
Having you listen is enough for the moment.

They head down to the subway and get in, sitting a few seats away from Wyatt.

Wyatt notices them and beckons them over but they don’t move. After a few moments he gives up and sits across from them.
WYATT

What is up you two? Anything to share?

JULIAN

We have a lot to talk about.

The train goes through a tunnel.

---

INT. COFFEE SHOP

Vlad walks up to the counter to get his drink and gets knocked into Virgil.

VIRGIL

Hey watch it buddy, I’m walking here.

VLAD

Sorry I was just-

VIRGIL

You think because you’re bigger than me you can push me around?

VLAD

No can you just step aside I-
VIRGIL
Oh now you’re telling me what to do. Why I outta-

BARRY
That’s it you two. Both of you out.

VIRGIL
But he’s the-

VLAD
I am over this.

Vlad and Virgil leave the shop yelling at each other.

VLAD
That’s it. You gotta stop this.

VIRGIL
You’re the one who is always-

VLAD
No. You’re done speaking now it’s my turn. When will you stop? When will you learn?

VIRGIL
I just-
VLAD

You don’t know me. You don’t understand. Whatever I did, it’s not worth you getting aggressive about. If you have a problem with me, you either say it or I am going to get on with my day.

Vlad grabs his drink and leaves.

Virgil, holding back tears, gets his things together and leaves.

INT. WYATT’S APARTMENT

Wyatt opens the door, throwing down his coat. It is late so he collapses on the couch. He rolls over and starts to write doodling on a notepad. Once he starts to begin writing-

Lila knocks on the door.

WYATT

Who is it?

LILA

You know it’s me.
WYATT
I suppose I do. You might as well come on in.

LILA
We have got to talk.

WYATT
We just did, and I am working on what Julian told me. That’s why you’re here right? So, what about?

LILA
I can’t take these men anymore.

WYATT
That is what they all say.

LILA
No, I don’t mean that they are too much to juggle or too many to count or too perfect or too dumb or-

WYATT
They are...?

LILA
Obscene, ill mannered, ridiculous, suspicious, cringy, arrogant, and just about all the things that I am forced to handle.

WYATT
You don’t have to.

LILA
Of course I shouldn’t have to. I know and so should they but there is too much that I have to clarify and push away. No is never enough and yes is never enough. Maybe is too little. Later is too never. I am tired of being the teacher and the nurturer and the prize in all of this.

WYATT
What would you have me do about it?

LILA
Show them I am more but not that they are less. Show them I am more than the way that I dress. If it’s too much to ask then I am not playing. If it’s not interesting enough for the others-

WYATT

Then what am I even saying? I get what you’re saying I guess or suppose. You want to be seen as more than your clothes. I could try to play you down or make you seem more serious.

LILA

That is the issue. That doesn’t matter. I shouldn’t be the object in this. I shouldn’t be some prize. It is one thing to find love but I am not ending this with a kiss. I am not looking to be wooed.

WYATT

That doesn’t sound all that bad.

LILA

Because you don’t have to live it.

WYATT

Neither do you.
LILA

Technicalities. It’s about the message, remember? I am more than myself. Anyone who sees me will need to know that I represent them.

WYATT

That’s too much weight to put on yourself.

LILA

I know. That is the burden. The problem is that this is more common than you could realize. Ask Terri. She will tell you.

WYATT

She would have told me. We talk about everything.

LILA

You may have a good relationship in the workplace but these sort of expectations go further than what you two have. It’s a truth she faces, as we all do. Ask her.
Wyatt

I don’t-

Wyatt turns and Lila has left. He picks up his drink puts away the notepad.

INT. COFFEE SHOP

Barry is flipping through his phone between a slow trickle of customers.

Wyatt is sitting at a table, noticeably impatient.

Terri enters.

Terri

Hey Wyatt, I got your call. Sorry it’s been a busy night but you seem flustered. How can I help?

Wyatt

I want to help you. Help me too, but mostly you.

Terri

You sure this couldn’t have been a text conversation?
WYATT
We always talk like that though. We don’t get to flesh out ideas though.

TERRI You’re the idealist. I handle your books and just about whatever trouble you wind up in.

WYATT Trouble? No I am just trying to be detailed. I am struggling with Lila. She is more than some girl but how do I depict that?

TERRI
That depends on what you want her goals to be.

WYATT
That’s interesting. Is that how I did it for you?

TERRI
Not even close. All you did was personify the typical secretary role and I popped into your mind.

WYATT

But you’re more than that.

TERRI

Better believe it, but until you write it out, I am just some little voice in your head.

Wyatt takes a drink, visibly puzzled.

WYATT

That doesn’t help me.

TERRI

Look. Throw her into some situations and see what happens.

WYATT

Won’t she be mad at me for that?

TERRI

Is that part of who she is? Just start with the little stuff. Let her tell you what she wants. Maybe it will help you with Julian as well.

Wyatt has a realization and runs out.
INT. WYATT’S APARTMENT

Wyatt runs in, finding the apartment is a mess.

Lila is laying on the couch with her legs thrown over the arm.

Julian is sitting in a chair facing the television.

    WYATT
    What happened here?

    LILA
    You were brainstorming.

    JULIAN
    Organization was never your strong suit.

    WYATT
    That may be true but come on this is ridiculous.

    JULIAN
    We didn’t touch anything.

    LILA
    Not yet anyway.

    WYATT
    What does that mean? You’re telling me you two are an item now?
JULIAN

Yep.

LILA

Sure are.

WYATT

And how did this happen?

LILA

That’s not important. The details are boring. The fun part is how we are gonna break it to the others.

WYATT

Like Virgil?

LILA

I don’t care what he thinks.

JULIAN

The point is that it doesn’t matter. We are together and you need to make sure that it looks good.

WYATT

You don’t need my approval the idea that you would concerns me. Why are you two dating?

LILA
It is easier this way. The others won’t stop hounding me and we can be just friends.

JULIAN
Lila has been explaining some of the complexities of our differed complexions.

LILA
Together we are able to divide and conquer.

Lila hugs Julian as the Vlad and Virgil run in.

VIRGIL
Ah man! I thought I was-

VLAD You’re not the lover boy here. If anyone was it would be me.

WYATT
All of you stop this. Give me some time to think about this. I need to clear my head.
Wyatt turns to the window as Vlad, Virgil and Lila exit.

JULIAN

She doesn’t need me you know? Yeah a companion is nice but I think women are a lot stronger than you think.

WYATT

What am I doing? I am trying so hard to make all of you happy and it’s not working out.

JULIAN

Are you pandering to us or to potential critics? Let the characters mess up. Let us get hurt if needed.

WYATT

But isn’t this sort of thing supposed to give people hope?

JULIAN

Sometimes, sure. There is no point in giving hope if there is no chance that it can be replicated.
WYATT
How do I tell that story though? I can’t seem to get your stories right.

JULIAN
Getting it right won’t happen. If you need to tell a story where Lila or I succeed in order to send a message, do it. If you need to show one of us falling in order to show an injustice, do it. If you don’t want to have that level of scrutiny, find a new profession.

WYATT
Isn’t that a little harsh?

JULIAN
If you’re afraid to say the wrong thing that means you care. If you don’t ask for input when talking about this, you are an idiot.

WYATT
So I need to research.
JULIAN

When it calls for it but, if you want to tell the stories of relatable characters, you need the influence of real people. Because, dude, you’re not black and any women in Lila’s position could add a lot to what she is going through.

WYATT

I guess I always thought I needed to come up with the story myself. I didn’t mean to... I will be better.

JULIAN

I believe you. I have a train to catch.

Julian jumps out of the window and lands in a train car.

INT. SUBWAY CAR

Julian is standing alone in the car, he brushes himself off and starts checking out one of the advertisements.

A rush of people get into the car, Virgil among them. He sits facing Julian.
Julian turns from Virgil and pulls out his phone. Virgil angrily sketches a picture of Vlad in his notepad while multiple stops happen and the car starts to empty. Vlad enters the car, scoffing at Virgil and avoiding eye contact with Julian.

Virgil nervously repositions himself but continues to draw. His attention switches between Julian and Vlad, switching the focus of his drawing.

Lila sits in the center of the car, asleep and reclined.

VIRGIL

You know, she’s too good for y-

VLAD

Shut it. The adults are thinking.

VIRGIL

I am an adult! And she is asleep.

VLAD

Better for her to sleep than to hear your whining.

JULIAN

Maybe she should be awake for this.

There has been enough of people speaking on her behalf.
VIRGIL
I’ll shake her.

JULIAN
Now why would you think that was okay?

VLAD
What is wrong with you?

VIRGIL
Nothing weird, you guys suck.

VLAD
What did you mean about speaking on her behalf?

JULIAN
You know how Virgil said the thing to me about basketball? It’s the same thing. Guys try so hard to impress girls we end up stepping on their toes.

VLAD
Or their rights?

VIRGIL
That’s a little extreme.
JULIAN

Is it?

Lila stirs and they speak quieter.

JULIAN (CONT’D)

What if she wants to define herself through her own standards, without guys like that.

Julian nods his head to two guys who are staring at Lila.

One of them takes a picture.

VIRGIL

There are always going to be creeps. What are we supposed to do about it?

VLAD

We could actually hold people who do that sort of stuff accountable.

VIRGIL

You want to call them out whenever it happens?

VLAD

Not angrily. Peaceful stuff always sits better with people.

JULIAN

Sometimes the peaceful doesn’t work. Especially when you walk around and people look at you like that.

Two women standing behind Julian clutch their bags. One of them is messing with the pepper spray on her lanyard.

VLAD

That’s fair.

JULIAN

It’s not though.

VIRGIL

He didn't mean it like that.

JULIAN

I know, it is just important to point out that words have meaning.

Lila stops feigning sleep.

LILA

Sometimes actions have more impact but yes words are important too.

Like any good meal, it is good to have complimenting portions.
VLAD

Were you awake that whole time?

VIRGIL

You sneaky-

JULIAN

Hey! Be nice.

LILA

Be respectful. Please. It makes people feel better when you act like they have value.

VLAD

So now what? Does this mean we are ready?

JULIAN

I think we could make a pretty cool story.

Lila nods and pulls the emergency brake on the train. The brakes sound like an obnoxious alarm.
INT. WYATT’S APARTMENT

Wyatt wakes up. The apartment is far messier than it has been seen so far. He shuffles through some of his paperwork. He finds his phone, where his alarm is going off.

    TERRI

    Wake up, Wake Up, Wake UP, WAKE UP!

Wyatt turns it off and collects himself.

Finding sketches of Lila and Julian, he pulls out his computer and starts to write. He is speaking but he ends up trailing off.

    WYATT

    FADE OUT

END OF PLAY